During the last fifteen years we have seen an enormous progress in the technologies of information, among them, is the possibility of expanding the features of bibliographies beyond the traditional list of authors and titles. The main novelty of this 'automatic bibliography' is that researchers can access directly most of the documents simply by 'clicking' on the 'link' (please see statistic). The advantages of this feature alone in terms of cost, time and diffusion are obvious. On the other hand, this 'automatic' bibliography entails also a major constituent of the postmodern times we are living through: its duration is ephemeral. In the time to come most 'links' will probably disappear, be deleted or changed and therefore this bibliography will be less useful as time passes. In the meantime please enjoy. I enjoyed writing this bibliography and hope the readers will enjoy using it.

In the books, articles and papers cited you can find bibliography dealing with Hilferding's influence nowadays and on authors such as Schumpeter, Lenin, Sweezy and others. This bibliography also includes works on Hilferding's life and his political and intellectual evolution. Also, at the end of this text, the resources I found available in spanish are included. There are also traceable references to Rudolf Hilferding (some very critical) in the works of Habermas, Guy Debord, Lukács, Negri, Hardt, Polanyi, Laclau, Trotsky, Wallerstein, Mises, Hayek and others, but the analysis of them goes beyond the scope of this bibliography.

¹ I owe an special debt of thanks to Fernando Ortiz de Apodaca who was kind enough to read the draft.

Note please that this bibliography is limited to the literature on Hilferding written in english and spanish²

You can read the note on the method used, and the terms of use at the end of the text.

Links among large banks were not long-lived, so it should be rejected that interlocking directorates worked as a long-lasting coordination scheme of a hypothetical banking cartel. Certainly, these networks were especially dense in 1925 and 1966-67, but they disappeared quickly, so a few years later we find that each large bank maintained its own group, distinctly apart from the others. V) Finance and Capital translations into Spanish:

As far as I know there are three editions of Finance and Capital into spanish. The first was made in 1963, translated from the german edition by Romano Garcia, Vicente:

-Hilferding, Rudolf (1963) El Capital Financiero. Madrid: Editorial Técnos. Reprinted in 1973 and reprinted again in 1985 in the "Clásicos del Pensamiento" series, with a preface by Segura, Julio.

The second edition was made at La Habana (Cuba):

-Hilferding, Rudolf, (1971) El Capital Financiero. La Habana: Ed. Ciencias Sociales Instituto Cubano del Libro.

And the third edition at Mexico city:

-Hilferding, Rudolf (1973) El capital financiero. México: El Caballito.

-There are parts of the Técnos edition digitalised at:

VII) Other resources in spanish

At the Biblioteca Nacional (Madrid) there is a copy of:

-Hilferding, Rudolf (1928) Nuevas tácticas para el Nuevo Capitalismo. Gráfica Socialista.

This is the first known translation into spanish of Hilferding, but I have not seen the copy yet, so I don't know to which original title corresponds.

A discussion by a neoclassical-keynesian economist in an important spanish newspaper with critical but insubstantial references to Hilferding:

-Velarde Fuentes, Juan Socialismo en Crisis, ABC, Jun., 2, 2006.

-Velarde Fuentes, Juan Sobre Marx, ABC, Aug. 19, 2004.

-Velarde Fuentes, Juan La Ecomonía Mundial: Perspectiva Española, ABC, Jul. 26, 2004.

All of them at: <http://www.abc.es/> (Please type Hilferdig on the buscar button)

Also at this place, there are historical press records on Hilferding when he was minister of finance during the Weimar Republic.

-There should be press records on Hilferding at the Fundación Pablo Iglesias, Hemeroteca, looking for El Socialista, official newspaper of the Spanish Socialist Party (P.S.O.E.), but there can be problems if you do an automatic seach inside the digitalised edition:

A NOTE ON THE METHOD USED: Note please, there can be papers published in Internet without link in this bibliography. Comments regarding errors and omissions will be received with gratitude.

If you are interested on a paper or an author without link, I recommend you try first Google with the extension .pdf or use a pdf search engine like: www.pdf-search-engine.com. For Firefox Navigator there is also a plug-in of the pdf search engine <http://www.pdfgeni.com/> that can be useful. Otherwise use the .doc extension, and in last place you can try with Google Academic. Looking for bibliography in other languages you can use the Language Tools of Google with the interface in the language of your choice.
